

Biography:

f’ is a visual artist who traces his research path between exploration and experience.

Through the intricate relationship between humanity and nature, f' examines pressing political and social issues. By synthesizing collective data with personal practice, f' creates poetic and visionary intermedia works.f' investigates how digital episteme shapes social imagery and the perception of reality—examining how technological mediation influences perception across cultural, social, and environmental contexts.

The human body is at the epicenter of f' practice, regarded as both an object of control and a site of resistance, whether in terms of physical mobility or perceptual management. This concern has led f' to intentionally live for extended periods in border regions—places where people undergo profound biographical transformations.

f' artistic approach is grounded in direct action and responsive exchange with encountered realities, realized through participatory, inter-present processes. Complementing this, f' methodology operates through collective intelligence in synergy with professional networks.

Since 2019, f' has been part of the Wurmkos collective and serves as P.M. & Advisor for Recipient.cc.

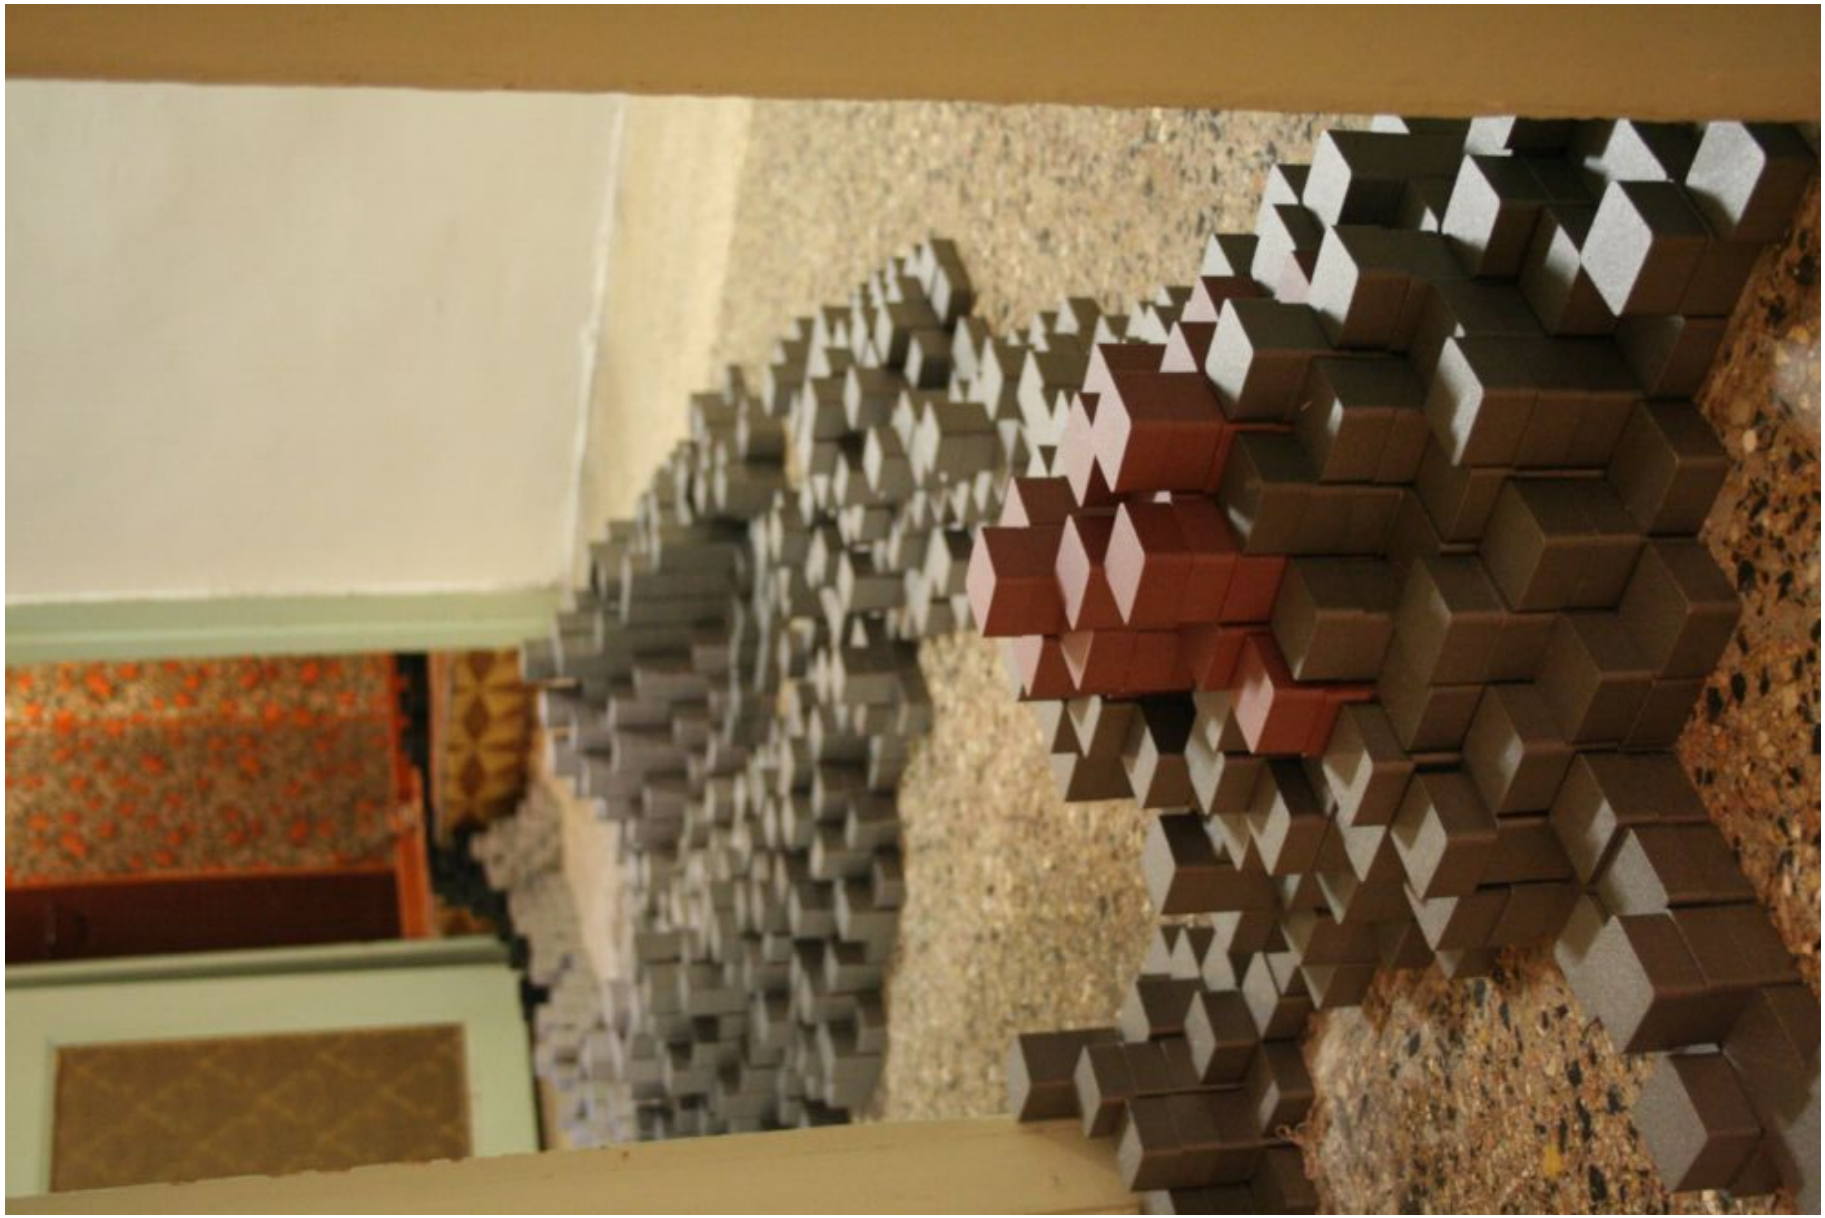

f' is the founder and artistic director of a2410.it, Carrozzeria Margot, and Mobeel.

f' archive and studio are based in Canzo, Italy.

DESCRIPTION:
Dudy Guard is the title of a digital photograph taken from the f's personal archive. The file size is 508 Kb and contains 513,315 pixels in 256 colors. A software, developed by engineer G.D., has calculated and located the pixels for each color in the image. This documentation is used to transform each pixel into a wooden voxel (i.e., half-cubes measuring 4x4x2.5 cm), painted with a varnish derived from the original RGB code of the pixel. Each color that makes up the entire image is referred to as a "work portion". Each portion is accompanied by a folder containing a data sheet indicating its position in the digital grid of the original image and a sales contract, which states that the portion is authentic only if the buyer does not own any other portions of the same work. The price of each portion is proportional to the cost of production of the same. Therefore, prices vary from a few euros to a few thousand euros. The possibility that the entire original image can be reassembled is limited to the remote event that all portions are made and distributed. If it were to be totally reassembled in this way, the image would weigh 13,449.45 kg, occupy an area of 22.4x36.6 meters, and have a total volume of 17.311296 m³. f' uses the half-cubes as raw material to construct, for each exhibition occasion, a temporary and changing installation, adapted to each new space without any reference to the original image from which they derive.
