

Biography:

f’ is a visual artist who traces his research path between exploration and experience.

Through the intricate relationship between humanity and nature, f' examines pressing political and social issues. By synthesizing collective data with personal practice, f' creates poetic and visionary intermedia works.f' investigates how digital episteme shapes social imagery and the perception of reality—examining how technological mediation influences perception across cultural, social, and environmental contexts.

The human body is at the epicenter of f' practice, regarded as both an object of control and a site of resistance, whether in terms of physical mobility or perceptual management. This concern has led f' to intentionally live for extended periods in border regions—places where people undergo profound biographical transformations.

f' artistic approach is grounded in direct action and responsive exchange with encountered realities, realized through participatory, inter-present processes. Complementing this, f' methodology operates through collective intelligence in synergy with professional networks.

Since 2019, f' has been part of the Wurmkos collective and serves as P.M. & Advisor for Recipient.cc.

f' is the founder and artistic director of a2410.it, Carrozzeria Margot, and Mobeel.

f' archive and studio are based in Canzo, Italy.

DESCRIPTION:
Cosimea is a collaborative project by artist Francesco Bertelé and architect Emanuele Cavallo. It envisions a fantasy village suspended between earth and sky, structured around three conceptual spheres: 1. The Fluctuating Sphere 2. The Surface Sphere 3. The Underground Sphere Cosimea is an ideal village composed of individual dwelling units. It represents a garden of inner forms made visible through bodily gestures and ways of being. These structures reflect a blend of ancient and innovative architectural techniques through their construction methods and materials. Conceptual framework The creation of Cosimea begins with observing the animal world, emphasizing humanity's integration within nature rather than its dominance over it. The creative process is guided by the ethical framework of becoming-animal 1. This approach is not about imitating the animal world but rather exploring and defining the unique essence of each individual as an integral part of the whole. Core Skills and Objectives of the Project 1. Collective Interaction: Fostering collaboration in both the design and realization phases of the work. 2. Imaginative Projection: Encouraging intimate and personal exploration of ideas and emotions. 3. Material Expertise: Researching, selecting, and working with natural materials essential for green building. 4. Technical Knowledge: Studying ancient building techniques and integrating them with sustainable, bionic-inspired architectural methods. Through Cosimea, we aim to blend creativity, sustainability, and emotional connection, constructing a village that bridges the natural and the human, the past and the future.
