

Biography:

f’ is a visual artist who traces his research path between exploration and experience.

Through the intricate relationship between humanity and nature, f' examines pressing political and social issues. By synthesizing collective data with personal practice, f' creates poetic and visionary intermedia works.f' investigates how digital episteme shapes social imagery and the perception of reality—examining how technological mediation influences perception across cultural, social, and environmental contexts.

The human body is at the epicenter of f' practice, regarded as both an object of control and a site of resistance, whether in terms of physical mobility or perceptual management. This concern has led f' to intentionally live for extended periods in border regions—places where people undergo profound biographical transformations.

f' artistic approach is grounded in direct action and responsive exchange with encountered realities, realized through participatory, inter-present processes. Complementing this, f' methodology operates through collective intelligence in synergy with professional networks.

Since 2019, f' has been part of the Wurmkos collective and serves as P.M. & Advisor for Recipient.cc.

f' is the founder and artistic director of a2410.it, Carrozzeria Margot, and Mobeel.

KEYWORD: #drawings #sculptures #installation #para_performance

CULTURAL DEFINITION:
../Edition: 1 / 1

TECHNICAL DATA:
../Object: reactivable
../Matter and technique: drawings on paper(mixed media), various objects. Para_performance and installation.

DESCRIPTION:
This installation is made up of small, everyday objects—things we don’t usually pack when we travel but which seem to reappear in every new place we arrive. On his journey from home to the exhibition space, f' collects these objects and transform them into small sculptures. f' alters their shape and function, giving each a poetic meaning tied to its specific title. In the exhibition, f' places these objects directly within the building, using its architecture instead of supports or pedestals. He spend time living in the exhibition space, often for extended periods. During this time, f' continuously modifies the objects, adapting them to the space. This work exists only through its movement—it comes alive as it travels and is reshaped in different locations. What remains after the exhibition are drawings and small sculptures—forms that have emerged over time. These pieces evolve with each presentation, adapting to new environments, growing, and aging. The drawings capture the enduring essence of these forms—their identity as ideas and concepts that expand and multiply. They hint at an ongoing, incomplete attempt to ease nostalgia and confront solitude. The sculptures, however, are tied to the present moment. They are made on-site using everyday materials found locally, shaped through simple, spontaneous actions. The arrangement reflects f's experience of the place, its community, and its connections. This process seeks to give the objects a sense of belonging to the space, assigning them a necessary order in what we might call “home”—a fleeting collection of hazy, emotional memories.
